"To bring together the records of the past and to house them in buildings where they will be preserved for the use of men living in the future, a nation must believe in three things. It must believe in the past. It must believe in the future. It must, above all, believe in the capacity of its people so to learn from the past that they can gain in judgment for the creation of the future."

FOREWORD

This Digest will be a boon to all who are interested in Wisconsin history. The location and chronology of Catholic churches and services are capital items for accurate historical estimates. Church sites and dates usually are scattered in sources, published or oral, and are not easily available. The unique source for places and dates is The Catholic Almanac and Directory. This source is rare and not easily accessible, and presents difficulties when in use.

Through patient research this source is now presented in a Digest for names, sites and dates. Besides other uses, the Digest will provide the basis from which studies may be projected, particularly those related to the problems of church distribution, population shifts and unchurched areas.

Upon this accomplishment we congratulate the directors and workers of the Wisconsin Historical Records Survey.

PREFACE

The Wisconsin Historical Records Survey, under the National direction of Sargent B. Child, is engaged in a nation-wide survey of the records of State and local governmental units. This work was initiated in January 1936 as a part of the Federal Writers Project of the Work Progress Administration (title changed to Work Projects Administration on July 1, 1939). In Wisconsin the project began operation in February 1936 and on July 1, the present supervisor was appointed. In August 1936 the Survey became an independent part of Federal Project No. 1. Since September 1939 the Survey in Wisconsin has been a State-wide project sponsored by the University of Wisconsin and the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

The objective of the Survey in Wisconsin has been the preparation of complete inventories of the records of the State offices, of county, city, and other local governmental units, of church records, of American imprints and newspapers, and of manuscript depositories and collections.

The Directory of Catholic churches in Wisconsin is one of our publications in the series of inventories of Church Archives but, while the publication of the inventory of church records is a part of a nation-wide survey of the record of the various religious denominations, the publication of similar directories is not contemplated for every State. In Wisconsin the effective history of the Catholic Church is as old as the State and therefore it is extremely difficult at times to follow the chronological order of the establishment of the various Roman Catholic Churches. To simplify this matter and to furnish a guide, we believe that it is very desirable that we prepare this directory to guide us in the publication of the inventories of the records of the church.

We believe this publication will be helpful to scholars and writers of religious history because our workers have searched a large file of directories and almanacs for the information compiled in this directory. Our workers checked through 105 printed volumes of directories covering 109 years of church history in Wisconsin, 1833 to 1941. Two volumes, those for 1839 and 1844, were not in the collection available to us at St. Francis Seminary. To simplify the use of the directory, we have prepared three indexes, one by name of church one by location of the church in the governmental unit, and one by the place name location of the church.

The information was compiled in the field by Mr. Peter Hoolihan with the assistance of various workers. The arranging, compiling, and rechecking of the information, and the preparation of the entries was completed by Cyrus Ingraham, Paul Reinke, John Lazniak, and Peter Hoolihan. We wish to thank the students at the St. Francis Seminary, who are residents of various parishes, for their assistance. We are especially indebted to the Rev. Peter Leo Johnson, Professor of Church History, St. Francis Seminary and also the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Joseph A. Marx, Vicar General of the Green Bay Diocese. They examined the work and gave us valuable assistance in the form of criticism and suggestion.

Both the field work and the final editing of this directory was completed in the Milwaukee office of the Survey and it was prepared under the immediate direction of Mr. William E. Haney and under the general supervision of our District Supervisor, Mr. Elmer Plischke. The Survey acknowledges with appreciation the assistance and support of the District Director of Community Service Programs and the Inspector of the Research and Records Programs of the Milwaukee District of the Work Projects Administration.

INTRODUCTION

Prior to 1836 the present state of Wisconsin was a part of the Michigan Territory. In that year Michigan became a state and the balance of the territory became the Wisconsin Territory, which embraced within its boundaries all of the present state of Wisconsin together with parts of the present states of Minnesota and Iowa. In 1848 Wisconsin was accorded statehood and its geographical boundaries were prescribed. There has been virtually no change in these boundaries since the establishment of statehood.

The formation of the Roman Catholic dioceses in Wisconsin commenced in 1833, when the Detroit Diocese was circumscribed, including the present state of Wisconsin. Ten years later on November 28, 1843, that portion of the diocese known as the Wisconsin Territory was set aside and designated the Milwaukee Diocese, with the Cathedral at Milwaukee.

Two additional dioceses were established in Wisconsin in 1868. Green Bay Diocese, created March 3, 1868, embraced the northwestern quarter of Wisconsin situated east of the Wisconsin River, from which the boundary courses eastward along the southern boundaries of Adams, Marquette, and Green Lake Counties, thence northward along the eastern boundary of Green Lake County, to the northeast corner of Green Lake County, then directly eastward to the Manitowoc River and down the river to Lake Michigan. The La Crosse Diocese was created September 6, 1868, and embraced that portion of Wisconsin which is situated to the north and west of the Wisconsin River. The balance of the state remained within the Milwaukee Diocese, which was elevated to the position of Archdiocese on February 12, 1875.

On May 10, 1905, Superior Diocese was created and formed from parts of Green Bay and La Crosse Dioceses, each of which received a portion of the territory of the Milwaukee Diocese. Since by 1905 the county boundaries were prescribed more or less in their current form, the delineation of the four dioceses followed county lines rather than natural boundaries. Inasmuch as they are described at the head of each diocese in this directory, they are not repeated here.

To enhance the consultant's appreciation and understanding of the various elements comprising an individual entry in this directory, the procedural steps utilized may be outlined in the following manner.

A card was originally prepared for each church when the name of the church first appeared in the Catholic annual directory, and the card was then checked against each subsequent appearance of the name of the church in succeeding volumes of the directory. The location of the church by name of settlement, post office, and county also was noted on these cards. When a church failed to appear for a period of 5 years, it was assumed to have changed its location or to have become defunct and its respective card was so annotated. About

Cont'd. Introduction

4,000 cards were thus prepared and approximately 200,000 checks were made, which work took an average of two men about 1 year.

Before continuing with the method of procedure used in compiling the data, it may be well to note some of the difficulties encountered. In the early days county lines were shifting constantly, and due to such changes and also to the sparseness of the settlements, the locations of churches, missions, and stations could not be readily identified, except by names or numbers of townships or by the name of the nearest post office. Sometimes the settlement adopted the name of the local trader or the name of the church, and the names of both towns and churches changed, but it rarely happened that the name of the church and the name of the location both changed at the same time.

As emigration increased and more settlements came into existence, there was a corresponding increase in the number of post offices within a smaller area and consequently the locale of a not readily identifiable church was more restricted. After county, town, and village lines were permanently established, especially in northern and northwestern Wisconsin, about the turn of the century, it was easier to identify churches and locations in succeeding directories. In undertaking this research, strict attention was not paid to boundary lines of counties, until about 1905, unless there was a large variance in the location of a church, because the large areas encompassed by counties, especially in the early days, were not of much assistance in determining the location of churches.

When all available annual church directories were consulted, the cards containing the name of the church, location (together with the name of the county), and dates were then turned over to an editorial staff, which separated the cards by counties, and then proceeded to align them in an alphabetical arrangement if the location could be readily ascertained from the information contained on the cards. Reference was made to maps, especially the county maps of the Wisconsin Highway Commission and the historical maps printed in the Wisconsin Blue Books. Where necessary, the U. S. Postal Guide was consulted. It was sometimes difficult to trace the continuity of a church where either its name or location was changed, especially during the early development of the church. Where the church name has remained unchanged while its location changed according to the listings in the annual directories but nevertheless remained within a small geographical area, it was assumed to be the same church, especially if the location did not cross town lines. Where there were gaps in the sequence of dates of churches located near a county boundary, according to our original survey, such apparent discrepancies were frequently explained by the fact that the location of the church was listed under an adjoining county. Occasionally an apparent inconsistency in change of name or location was explained by rechecking the sources to determine continuity in the service of a single resident pastor. Available Catholic Church histories were of considerable value in eliminating these and other difficulties in compiling this directory. As noted in the bibliography, they were published towards the end of the nineteenth century, at a time when much of the early history of the church had already been recorded. These histories were particularly valuable in determining local names of settlements which have long since gone out of existence or which have changed their names.

While in some instances reasonable conjecture would suggest the connection of certain churches, they were listed separately under their given names and locations, but wherever reasonable, they were identified by cross reference, permitting the consultant to determine the situation for himself. Sources of information other than the annual directories have been cited wherever they were consulted.

In this work, it was necessary to consider the church not as a building or a parish, but rather as a congregation. If the congregation as a unit continued in existence, separate entries were not prepared in the event that church buildings were rebuilt or removed to new locations. It might also be noted that many contemporary churches were formerly missions or preaching stations, whose names frequently differed. These changes of name are indicated in the entries.

Basically, therefore, this directory constitutes a digest of that portion of the Catholic annual directories which is concerned with the establishment and existence of Catholic churches in the state of Wisconsin, supplemented with pertinent information gleaned from available Catholic church histories, to present in a very concise form the major data concerning the establishment of each individual Roman Catholic church in Wisconsin, together with its location, change of name, and services in organizing auxiliary missions and preaching stations.
